International

- Iran is holding talks with Russia to sell it about 40 tonnes of heavy water from its nuclear program, Iran's deputy foreign minister was quoted as saying by the Fars news agency. Under last year's landmark nuclear deal between Iran and world powers, Tehran is responsible for reducing its stock of heavy water which is a component of making nuclear weapons and producing nuclear energy.
- Prince Sultan Bin Salman, President of Saudi Commission for Tourism and National Heritage, has launched the Post-Umrah Programme, an initiative which allows Umrah pilgrims to convert their visas into tourist visas.
- Syria's war has destroyed agricultural infrastructure and fractured the state system that provides farmers with seeds and buys their crops, deepening a humanitarian crisis in a country struggling to produce enough grain to feed its people. The country's shortage of its main staple wheat is worsening. The area of land sown with the cereal - used to make bread - and with barley has fallen again this year, the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) told Reuters.
- Lawmakers have moved a bipartisan bill in the House of Representatives, expressing serious reservations over US arms sales to Saudi Arabia and support for the Saudi operation in Yemen. The joint bill, moved by Democrat Ted Lieu and Republican Ted Yoho during the weekend, is a companion to a similar legislation moved in the Senate last month.
- NATO is ten weeks away from launching a naval mission off Libya as part of a US-backed plan to close the Western Mediterranean migrant route to Europe, officials said. The advanced state of preparations for the operation was revealed by Italian Defence Minister Roberta Pinotti as leaders of the US, Britain, France, Germany and Italy met in Germany. The 6,000-strong force will be charged primarily with training up Libyan security forces but will be able to call on US warplanes and drones based in Italy for its protection if required.
